

Royal College of Physicians

Dr Felix Jackson Biography

I am a doctor and entrepreneur developing digital technology for the health and care sector. I trained as an Anaesthetist in the UK gaining my MRCP with the Royal College of Anaesthetists. Then, I left clinical practice to start working in digital health.

I founded medDigital, a digital healthcare communications agency, with Paul Gardner to focus on revolutionising health and care with digital communications.

In 2017, we launched medCrowd, the messaging technology for health and care that keeps everyone in touch while protecting confidential information to the required standards.

We were selected to join the incredible first cohort of the DigitalHealth.London Accelerator and won the prestigious Brand Amplifier MedTech Fit Society Silver Award. I also supported the GSTT Charity's Further Faster initiative to help SMEs and the NHS work together better.

I am now enjoying the incredible opportunity we have for digital health technology to help everyone get the best care.