

Royal College of Physicians

Dr Kate Cwynarski's biography

Kate Cwynarski, FRCP, FCRPATH, PhD

University College Hospital, London, UK

Dr. Kate Cwynarski is a Haem-Oncologist specialising in Lymphoma and CLL at University College London Hospital, London, UK. She trained at King's College, Hammersmith Hospital and Royal Free Hospital, London UK and received her MRC-funded PhD in immunology at Imperial College, London, UK.

Her sub-specialist interests include Primary Central Nervous System (CNS) Lymphoma, HIV-related lymphoma and T-cell Lymphomas and is involved in CAR-T cell trials for refractory NHL. She is Co-lead of the UK Primary CNS Lymphoma (PCNSL) Group and is a member of the National Cancer Research Institute (NCRI) Lymphoma Clinical Studies Group.

Dr. Cwynarski is involved in many clinical trials, has co-authored BCSH guidelines and she has authored or co-authored over 60 journal articles in Lancet Haematology, Journal of Clinical Oncology, Blood, AIDS, British Journal of Haematology and Bone Marrow Transplant

Presentation summary

Tremendous progress in our understanding of the biology of Hodgkin and non-Hodgkin lymphoma has resulted in significant activity translating this knowledge into new prognostic and therapeutic approaches. This session will outline the innovations that have improved patient outcome over recent decades and focus on recent discoveries and potential advantages and pitfalls of novel therapies. There have also been impressive developments in the field of immunotherapy for lymphoma: immunomodulators, immune checkpoint inhibitors, and cell therapy for lymphoma.