

Royal College of Physicians

Dr Orod Osanlou Biography

Orod is an ST6 in clinical pharmacology and therapeutics, and general internal medicine and is also a clinical trials physician. He is active within the RCP and is the deputy chair of the trainees committee, sits on RCP council, is organising the very first RCP trainees committee and has contributed in helping reform the training e-portfolio, internal medicine curriculum and shape of training through the JRCPTB management and policy board.

Orod was the very first RCP chief registrar and has a passion for quality improvement with notable projects including the introduction of a weekend patient flow service for a large district general hospital and an electronic handover system for a large teaching hospital. He is also undertaking the Elizabeth Garrett Anderson MSc in medical leadership with the NHS leadership academy.

Orod has a postgraduate certificate in medical education, is a fellow of the Higher Education Academy and has won local awards for implementing successful teaching programmes. Orod also has a flare for innovation and has been appointed as an NHS England Clinical Entrepreneur. Orod is undertaking a part time PhD in pharmacology and health economics and has multiple publications in the domains of pharmacology, internal medicine and leadership, and was a guest editor for the Future Hospital Journal in 2016.